

Postal Service Surveying Area For Possible Moves

By Robert E. Finneran

The postal service has been conducting real estate surveys in the downtown area and also seeking space for its Shawsheen substation.

A spokesman for the postal service said Wednesday that the survey being taken with regard to real estate costs in the downtown area is for the possibility of acquiring 8,000 square feet for its carrier operations.

He emphasized that there was no commitment toward any planning for the additional space, only a cost survey at this point.

John Conte of the postal service also emphasized that there are no plans to abandon the present building on Main Street.

The search for facilities in the Shawsheen area is to replace the present substation there. The postal service has a monthly lease on the facilities there which are located in the Aberdeen Apartments building recently taken over by new owners and being converted to condominiums.

Conte said there is no timetable for the move and that the postal service is remaining on a month-to-month basis with the new owners.

The additional space in the downtown area would be for carrier operations only, the spokesman said. The present facility would probably have some expanded public use, such as additional boxes and service area, although there are no definitive plans, other than to retain the structure as part of local postal services.

The post office building was part of controversy a few years ago when the postal service obtained an option on Andover Street land owned by Sidney P. White and announced plans to move operations to that location and close the Main Street office.

After considerable discussion among local officials, the postal authorities decided to retain the present office and move the processing operations to Lawrence.

Conte said, as in the case of the Shawsheen Substation study, there is no timetable established for completion of the real estate cost survey, or when any decisions would be made.

Citizen Advisory Group Suggestion Has Little Appeal

Susan Poore's suggestion that the School Committee appoint a permanent citizens advisory committee to work with them did not meet with much interest from her colleagues this week.

The question did not come to a vote Tuesday night, but the consensus was clear: The majority of the committee members would rather not create a standing committee to advise them.

Poore and Donald Robb are currently working to form a special committee to study the future of the West Traditional program, and the possible reorganization of the entire elementary program.

But the committeewoman said it might be better to form a permanent advisory committee that could take on the elementary reorganization as its first task.

The citizens committee would have the power to initiate discussion of issues with the school committee, Poore said, as well as acting as a "sounding board" to the committee. It would be made up of representatives of the entire community, she indicated, non-parents as well as parents with children at all levels within the system.

The committee, she added, would demand "serious involvement," on a level "a little higher than a PTO." Poore said it might be seen as "a farm team" for future school committee members or PTO leaders.

But most of the committee responded that while community input was important, a permanent advisory committee was unnecessary, and might even be counter-productive.

"The overall intent of increased community involvement is to be applauded," Robb said. "But I think the creation of a permanent body goes contrary to what we're trying to do here. It diffuses rather than focuses the responsibility. I would like to avoid the proliferation of committees."

Chairman Richard Neal said, "In the long run, (an advisory committee) may not allow as many people to have input. A committee developed for a particular purpose would better serve our needs."

Michael Giammusso agreed that he would rather see special, temporary committees formed "to deal with issues as they come up. I think that's a better way to go."

Only Robert Smith said he would favor the formation of a citizens advisory committee. However, he would still prefer to form a special committee to study elementary reorganization, he added, because he wanted to see teachers and school administrators on that committee as well as towns-

Sharing honors with her were Harold Kim of Potomac, MD., and Anja Bettina Osiander of Wachtburg, West Germany.

Keamy was also cited for distinguished scholarship in chemistry and mathematics during her senior year. She previously had won the Marsh Prize in science as a 10th grader and the Powers Prize in art.

She was a strong member of the girls' varsity squash team and a member of the Blue Key Society, a selected group of seniors who lead orientation of the academy's 450 new students each year, and was leader of the Bible study group.

Horribles Parade To Be Featured

One of the features of this year's old-fashioned Fourth of July celebration, according to the citizens' committee planning the event, will be a horrors parade. The only question is, what's a horrors parade?

The School Committee Tuesday night granted the holiday committee permission to send a letter home with schoolchildren next week to explain what a horrors parade is all about, in hopes of inspiring more community participation in the parade.

In a letter to the committee, the holiday committee's chairman, Peter Anderson, explained that a horrors parade consists of townspeople of all ages dressed in homemade costumes and accompanied by doll carriages, bicycles and pets. The more people participating, the better the parade, he indicated.

Anderson also urged the school committee to volunteer as targets for a dunk tank during the day's events. School Chairman Richard Neal said he's "already signed up," and urged his colleagues to join him.

Anderson, who is currently a program advisor in the school system, noted that profits from the dunk tank "could underwrite the whole cost of the Fourth of July — with the participation of the right people."

Summer Food Program

The Andover Public Schools announces the sponsorship of the Summer Food Service Program. Meals will be prepared at the West Elementary School and satellited to Christ Church Nursery, Greater Lawrence Collaborative, St. Mary's Parish of Lawrence and Andover's Spare Program. The program will operate from July 6 to Aug. 13. Meals will be available to all children enrolled with no physical segregation or other discrimination against any child because of race, sex, color or national origin in the operation of the feeding program.

School Committee Sets Goals

The goals of the School Committee during the next school year, according to committee members, will include keeping closer tabs on the school budget, as well as reviewing academic programs and the role of supervisors.

The committee Tuesday night agreed to focus on the following goals next year: develop a three or four-year financial plan; review the elementary school curriculum and organization; review the secondary school program, especially in light of the high school accreditation report, and to utilize the new facilities now under construction; review and refine the roles of principals and program advisors; continue working toward energy conservation; review the custodial and maintenance management; work toward a new drug and alcohol abuse program; try to boost staff morale at all levels; and develop a new system for monitoring the budget, both for the short- and long-term.

Committee Secretary Michael Giammusso will draft the committee's annual "direction letter", describing those goals, for the committee's approval. Direction letters are sent home to parents each fall.

Academy Receives Thanks

The School Committee Tuesday night agreed to send a letter thanking Phillips Academy Headmaster Donald McNemar for PA's "gracious gesture" of allowing the Andover High commencement exercises to move into the academy's athletic cage Monday night.

Without the use of the cage, the ceremony would have been rained out — and, the committee pointed out, even though the sun came out Tuesday, Lovely Field still would have been too soggy to use that night, either.

School Chairman Richard Neal also commended AHS Principal Mary Jennings and her staff for pulling off the move from the high school to Phillips on extremely short notice.

"It went off beautifully," Michael Giammusso commented.

Park Volunteers Needed

The Department of Community Services needs help once again with the cleanup of Recreation Park.

Last year several groups volunteered their services one or more times to help keep the area picked up. The weekend usage of Recreation Park is heavy throughout the summer and the department has no means of cleaning up the area Saturday or Sunday. The department has very limited maintenance help and major responsibilities especially during the summer. Therefore, any help, weekend or weekday, would be appreciated.

Any group willing to help during the summer or fall should contact the Department of Community Services at Shawsheen School. The department will provide cloth gloves and trash bags.

Merrimack College Gets Grant

Merrimack college recently received a grant of $34,078 from the New England Colleges Fund, an organization comprised of 29 independently supported four-year liberal arts colleges in New England.

Colleges in the New England Colleges Fund receive support for their institutions through contributions to the fund from area business leaders. For the last 29 years the fund has provided an efficient program through which the business community can support the central purpose of all the member institutions, assure their independence of political activity and express corporate self-interest in a group of colleges with a record of helping themselves.

To qualify for membership in the New England Colleges Fund, colleges must grant a minimum of 150 liberal arts degrees annually and must maintain 30 percent alumni participation in annual giving programs.

Last year Merrimack granted 199 liberal arts degrees and 34 percent of their alumni participated in the annual giving program.

National statistics indicate that the national average in alumni giving is 17 percent.

Rev. John E. Deegan, O.S.A., Merrimack president, is pleased with the grant which will be utilized for scholarships and general operating expenses. "I am pleased that both the business sector and our alumni are responding to the college's needs during these difficult economic times," he said. "As the federal government continues to withdraw its support of higher education, continued support from both the business community and alumni is vital," the Merrimack president remarked.

Businesses from the Greater Lawrence area that support the New England Colleges Fund are Brockway-Smith Comp., Inc. in Andover.

Memorial Recital

A carillon recital will be given at Memorial Tower, corner of Main and Salem Streets, Andover, on Saturday, June 12, at 4 p.m. The performance by Phillips Academy carillonneur Sally Slade Warner will be dedicated to the memory of her friend, Bridget Hayes (Abbot Academy '58), daughter of Claire and Bartlett Hayes (PA '22). At the time of her death last October, Bridget was a cellist with the Merrimack Valley Philharmonic. She was devoted to the members of the music department of Phillips Academy, who encouraged her musical interests.

The program is part of Phillips Academy's Alumni Weekend activities. Featured will be transcriptions of works by Bach, Beethoven, Mozart, Handel and Tchaikovsky, as well as a group of folk songs and a medley of Abbot Academy songs.

Senior Citizens Luncheon

A larger segment of the total population is over the age of 60. According to recent United Nations' statistics, there will be an estimated 600 million people age 60 and over, and 80 million age 80 and over out of a world population of 6.25 billion in the year 2000. In an effort to explore the challenge of aging, Bon Secours Hospital's "Healthy Issues" series will present its third annual luncheon for senior citizens titled "Harvesting the Fruits of Aging" on Wednesday, June 16, at 12 noon in the hospital's auditorium.

William O'Rourke, Ph.D., director, Department of Gerontology, Northern Essex Community College, and private counselor to elders and their families, will provide a supportive forum in which participants can learn to recognize their potential for continual growth. According to Dr. O'Rourke, "The senior years are a time for all of us to experience a new sense of freedom to pursue personal goals and to discover today the fulfillment of the promises of yesterday."

A nationally known lecturer, author and educator on matters related to the elderly, Dr. O'Rourke holds a Ph.D. from Boston College in counseling psychology and studied at the Andrus Gerontology Center at the University of California at Los Angeles. He serves as an adjunct associate professor of gerontology at the University of Lowell.

Teacher Designs Language Computer

Computers will be a big part of each Andover child's educational experience this September. Foreign language students at West Junior High will have an added bonus in the form of instructional software designed by their own teacher.

Douglas Halsted, Foreign Language teacher and former department head at West Junior High, got the idea from the first session of an in-service course designed for Andover's foreign language staff. A local resident who is in the business of writing programs for use with computers in schools presented a preliminary version of some French verb drills. At the suggestion of Dr. Michael Cave, Foreign Language Program Advisor, Halsted decided to work on his own improved version as part of the in-service course requirements.

"Most of the time, which so far represents about 25 hours since March, was put in before school, after school and on snow days and holidays," explained Halsted, who frequently carries the portable computer to his home in Lexington for additional work on the complex programming. Although the Apple II model is "user friendly," and thus can be programmed fairly easily, the task of developing usable programs for French instruction is a formidable one. With the assistance of former Andover students, Andy Nicholson, Matt Brown and Matt Avalos, however, most of the major problems have been resolved.

The West Junior High students, who are in grade 7 French, find the experience a novel one. While some use of instructional computers has already occurred in Andover, Halsted's program is the first to be devised by a practicing classroom teacher with the program content directly related to the course textbook. Verb drill, which has traditionally been among the most tedious activity encountered in foreign language teaching, has taken on an entirely new connotation, with the students literally competing to have a go at the keyboard.

When asked how he resolved the problem of one computer terminal for 25 kinds, Halsted explained that a combination of group work and individualization gives each student a try at the keyboard once in each five-day period. "The students somehow seem to accept corrections from the computer without any of the attendant ego problems which always seem to arise when the same type of corrections are made by a teacher, no matter how sensitive to the students' feelings the teacher might be," explained Halsted in his seemingly endless listing of the advantages of assigning the more routine aspects of language drill to the computer.

Educators have long known that the way in which errors are corrected or not corrected can determine the students' attitudes toward the subject, and in some extreme cases, toward the entire school experience. The impersonal nature of the computer, a plus in this case, combined with the obvious motivational advantages of this medium, appear to be on the verge of revolutionizing certain aspects of foreign language teaching in Andover.

Next on the schedule will be the creation of a program which will actually speak in French to the students, via pre-recorded material activated by the Apple II program. Halsted is confident that this will soon be ready for use in conjunction with the already existing program which parents had the chance to look at during the May 26 West Junior High's Open House.

"Computer laboratories and additional hardware anticipated for both junior high schools in September will provide the chance to make computers an integral part of the foreign language curriculum much sooner than we thought," says Halsted. "It's now up to the schedulers to give us the access to the labs next year."

Install special hand-grips for support when entering shower or tub. Towel racks and soap dishes are not meant for this purpose and may give way unexpectedly.

Student Is Summer Visitor

Andover will have a visitor from France this summer when Caroline Bettinger from Paris arrives through the North Atlantic Cultural Exchange League (NACEL). Peter and Shirley Galvin will be involved in the summer homestay program for American families by accepting Caroline as a member of their family for four weeks in July.

French students participating in the exchange are aged 14 to 18 and all speak English. They are eager to learn about the American way of life and pleased to share their French culture.

NACEL, a non-profit organization, seeks to promote international understanding by offering experiences in family sharing.

There is an urgent need to find additional homes for 24 boys and girls still waiting for assignments. Their hopes and dreams can be met if more Americans will open their homes and families beginning July 3. Students are allowed to travel with host families, are fully insured and have their own spending money.

Information and brochure is available from the area coordinator, Mrs. Virginia Adams, 279 Pleasant St., Reading, MA 01867.

of the Boston Athenaeum, has been donated to Merrimack College by Mrs. Jane Whitehill in memory of her husband.

The collection, valued at $20,000, contains many scarce and out-of-print publications, some in limited editions. Also included are American and European travel books, art books, sets of well-known authors such as Voltaire and William Morris, naval books and maritime history including a set of the American Neptune, Spanish books, books relating to European, Oriental and American art and architecture, a large paper edition of Pindar in a fine binding, a run of Massachusetts Historical Society collections and other periodicals, large sets of the official records of the Army and Navy during the Civil War and other books of varied interest.

"The impact of this gift on the library's collection is enormous," remarked Steve Bahre, director of the Merrimack McQuade Library. "Mrs. Whitehill allowed the library staff and members of our history department to select books from Mr. Whitehill's collection. Consequently, we were able to select books that benefit and complement the library's collection," Bahre explained.

"Area residents as well as students and faculty will truly benefit from this very generous gift," the library director said.

The college plans to publicly display the Whitehill collection in the fall.

Chamber President Looks Toward Challenging Year

By Sue Aucella Deacon

Last week, Mary Doherty, vice president and general manager of the Doherty Insurance Agency, Elm Street, took on a new set of responsibilities as the new president of the Andover Chamber of Commerce.

But community involvement is nothing new to Mary. She has been on the board of directors of the Andover Chamber for the past six years — and she is a past president of the Women's Division of the Greater Lawrence Chamber of Commerce, vice president of the Greater Lawrence Chamber, executive committee member of the Andover Center Association (formerly the Center Merchants), director of the Greater Lawrence Industrial Insurance Association, and a corporator of the Community Savings Bank, Lawrence.

"I feel that if the business community does well, the community itself will attract more people," she explained last week, sitting behind her desk at the Doherty Agency. "It makes for a nicer place to live."

Departing president Robert Finlayson passed the gavel to Mary last night during the Chamber's annual dinner at the Indian Ridge Country Club. But she began her official duties last Thursday morning, when she presided over her first director's meeting.

"I feel that it is a tremendous honor for anybody to be named president," she said last week. "And a responsibility, I might add. Past presidents have in the last few years led us to a point where the Chamber is a catalyst for the community. I look forward to a challenging year."

In the 20-year history of the Andover Chamber of Commerce, which includes roughly 175 members, Mary Doherty is the first woman to be named president. She does not, however, consider that particularly noteworthy.

"I would like not to put it into those terms," she said. "It would be an honor and a responsibility for anyone, either male or female."

A graduate of Our Lady of Nazareth Academy in Wakefield, Mary has worked at the family-owned Doherty Agency for nine years, since she graduated from Marymount College, Tarrytown, N.Y., with a bachelor of arts degree in economics. She has served as vice president in charge of life insurance and estate planning, and was named to her current position a year ago.

An Andover native, she is single and lives on Porter Road.

She sees the Chamber of Commerce as "a sounding board for businesses, as well as the town government. It has become very involved in town government, to the point that when something is about to happen in the town, officials say, 'Have you asked the Chamber?'"

Last year, for example, Chamber members helped persuade the selectmen to delay the reconstruction of Elm Square, scheduled to begin last fall, because they feared it would hurt their Christmas business.

"The Chamber had quite a turn-out at the selectmen's meeting when that was voted on, and it turned the whole situation around," she noted.

Chamber members have also become actively involved in town government, "in a real roll-up-your-sleeves way," by joining the Board of Selectmen, the Finance Committee and the Planning Board, she added.

In the coming months, Mary expects the chamber membership to help the Community Development and Planning department develop a new comprehensive plan for the town's future growth. The possibility of expanding the Central Business District is likely to become a major issue during that process, she said.

The Chamber has formulated a questionnaire that it will distribute to local businesses "to get their feelings on the need to expand. Because after all, if the business people don't feel there's a need, there's no sense in going ahead with it."

But she does believe there is "a definite need" to expand the business zone, "if it's planned well, instead of spot zoning, which has always been seen in a negative way in this town."

"The center merchants are keeping a close eye on it."

During her year in office, she plans to continue offering the forums and seminars started by Finlayson during the past year. Meant to inform business people in areas that may be outside their own expertise, the forums have covered such topics as tax shelters, banking and local government leadership. "I feel we should offer more to our membership than an annual dinner."

And she has already taken steps to work with the Northeast Consortium of Colleges and Universities, a group of seven local colleges that will move to Lawrence next fall. Through the consortium, she would like the Chamber to develop a training program for businesses.

At her first director's meeting, she was glad to announce that the Shawsheen Plaza Merchants Association will now be represented on the board of directors, "a first — we've never done this before." The Shawsheen merchants group, led by Irving Winn, includes more than 20 businesses.

"I think this will strengthen the overall business community," she pointed out. "Rather than being in constant battle, the right hand will know what the left hand is doing."

Working for a family business means working long hours, Mary noted. And whatever time is left she devotes to the Chamber, leaving her without much time for recreation. "It gets very crazy sometimes," she said. "In my spare time, I like to relax."

As Chamber president, Mary will be responsible for running the monthly meetings of the board of directors, keeping the membership informed of changes in local rules and regulations, acting as spokesman for the organization — "and just being extremely aware of what's going on within the community."

"I think it will be very interesting."

Summer Concerts To Resume

The Andover Department of Community Services will continue its New England tradition of musical concerts in Central Park this summer, beginning Wednesday, June 30, at 6:30 p.m. with "Sounds of the Big Band Era." A wide variety of musical entertainment will be offered every Wednesday evening throughout the summer months. Styles will include jazz, showtunes, dixieland, rock and roll, soft rock, country and a jug band. In the event of rain, concerts will be held on Thursday evenings.

Mother Of Eight Decides To Become A Nurse

By Sue Aucella Deacon

She wanted a large family, and she got one. And she devoted herself to raising that family of eight children for 27 years, always believing her working days were behind her forever.

But Dorothy Jayes of Algonquin Avenue, a 1950 graduate of Emmanuel College, is about to launch a new career — as a registered nurse.

She has successfully completed a full-time, two-year nursing program at Northern Essex Community College, Haverhill, and next month she will join the nursing staff at St. John's Hospital in Lowell.

Mrs. Jayes is sharing the joy of commencement with two of her children. Robert, 25, graduates from Harvard Medical School today, while Christopher, 22, graduated as a history major ("He says he adds a little culture to the family") from Boston College last week.

And the new graduate nurse is following in the footsteps of two of her five daughters: Eileen, 27, works as a nurse in Washington, D.C., and Mary, 21, will graduate from the nursing program at Boston College next fall.

A warm and attractive woman, Dorothy radiates self-assurance. But sitting in her cozy family room, she admits she was so frightened by the idea of going back to school that she sent her husband, Robert, into the Northern Essex admissions office to pick up the brochures; she was "too scared" to get out of the car.

"It was scary to go back to school, to start something new. I hadn't studied for 27 years." And after all those years as a mother and a homemaker, "I really never thought that I'd ever go out of the house again and work."

Robert's position as division manager of New York and New England for Wyeth Laboratories of Lowell Junction Road took the family from Massachusetts to Syracuse, N.Y. and Philadelphia, Penn. for 18 years. They returned to the state and settled in Andover three years ago.

By that time, there were only two children left at home: Michael, now 17 and a junior at Andover High; and Kathleen, now 12 and a Sanborn School sixth-grader. (Diane, 28, works as a biological manufacturing technician for Wyeth Labs in Pennsylvania, and Janice, 19, attends Mount Holyoke College; she will leave in August to spend her junior year in Mexico.)

The Jayes planned to have a large family, and Dorothy says she "never regretted it. I always felt it was very worthwhile to be at home. I wouldn't give up those days for anything."

At times, she jokes, she saw herself as "a dispatcher — always asking, 'Okay, where do you have to be and what time do you have to be there?' I guess I developed a few organizational skills, and I like order — which we didn't always have. But we've all done fine."

"It got a little quieter here" when most of the Jayes children went away to college or off on their own. "I don't like being not busy," Mrs. Jayes says. "I felt I should be doing something worthwhile."

Her education as a biology major at Emmanuel in Boston "probably gave me the desire to do something now," she adds. "It taught me the value of learning and of doing something." (She had worked in the Tufts Medical Center research laboratory until her first pregnancy.)

Nursing, however, was an almost acci-

Family Celebration

Mrs. Dorothy Jayes was toasted by family of eight on completion of her work leading to a degree in nursing at Northern Essex Community last weekend. In top photo, the graduate was joined by two other graduates, sons, Robert, Jr. (Harvard Medical) and Christopher (Boston College). In lower photo, the family gathering, standing, from left: Christopher, Eileen, Diane, Mary, Michael. Seated: Robert, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jayes, Janice and Kathleen. Townsman Photos by Maria C. dental choice. Her husband encouraged her to look into continuing education courses at Northern Essex, and after taking a course in anatomy and physiology to get her feet wet, she followed her classmates into the nursing program in the fall of 1980.

"I decided to just apply to the program. I felt that if I got in, that would be a sign that I was meant to do it. And I got in."

She had worked as a hospital volunteer in Pennsylvania and "loved it." And, determined to learn a marketable skill, she knew there would be job opportunities waiting for her as a nurse. She was also attracted to nursing's flexible schedules, which would leave her time to devote to her youngest child.

With her college degree, she was able to skip the required liberal arts courses. And by taking other required courses during the summer (like microbiology, sociology and "Marriage and the Family" — "Imagine me taking Marriage and the Family," she says wryly), she was able to concentrate on nursing courses alone during the spring and fall semesters.

That meant taking classes two days a week, and spending two or three full days each week in various hospitals, working under tight supervision as a student nurse. "That was a very hands-on thing. It was always a good day — although a little nerve-racking sometimes, especially at first."

Although she says she was the oldest student in her class, Dorothy "never felt funny at Northern Essex." She was surprised to find that very few of her classmates were 18 or 19 years old; most were in their thirties and were mothers, and many of them were working as LPNs or nurses aides.

Studying nursing was "very intensive and very time-consuming," but Mrs. Jayes managed to do it with minimal disruptions to life at home. "It's amazing what you can learn to do in less time. I learned I can cut some corners. On the whole, I don't think anyone really noticed it that much — but I didn't sit at night and watch TV, that's for sure!"

She did find it jolting to have to leave the house before Kathleen on some mornings: "I had never not been here before. I left her long lists of things to check before she left. It was a shock — but I got over it. And she did, too. We adjusted very easily."

While the youngest Jayes took their mother's new undertaking "as a matter of course," the older ones offered enthusiastic encouragement. "They thought it was marvelous that their mother was getting out and doing something — especially the ones in nursing, because they knew how hard it was."

The Northern Essex nursing graduation ceremony will be Sunday, when the graduates will receive associate degrees in nursing. But a pinning ceremony last Friday night at the college meant more to Dorothy, because it meant she had truly become a nurse.

The family celebrated with a large party at home last Friday night, after a family Mass at home offered by two Jesuit priests who are cousins of Robert Jayes. All eight children came home for the festivities.

Mrs. Jayes is now a graduate nurse; she will have to pass a state examination in July to become a registered nurse. She is scheduled to begin working shortly after the exam at St. John's — one of the hospitals where she worked as a student nurse, as well as a nurses aide last summer.

"At times I feel very good about it," Dorothy Jayes says of her future. "At other times I feel very scared. I'm a novice, and I know I have an awful lot to learn."

She does not equate her own commencement with Robert's and Christopher's. "I

Birds, in proportion to their size and weight, are about 75 percent stronger than are human beings.

don't connect their's with me at all. I consider it a big stepping stone for them, a real beginning." For her, that day was 32 years ago, when she graduated from college — at a time when "people scoffed at the idea of women going to college."

But she adds, on second thought, "I guess we are all starting something new."

Hoffman-Milley

Mr. and Mrs. Roy A. Hoffman

On Saturday, May 1, at the First Parish Congregational Church of Wakefield, Denise Lorraine Milley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd L. Milley of 92 North St., and Roy A. Hoffman, son of Mrs. Joan Hoffman and the late Leroy W. Hoffman of Andover, were united in marriage.

Rev. John Robertson performed the double ring ceremony. Alice LaFleur was the organist. Scott Wilson of Shrewsbury was the soloist and sang "the Lord's Prayer" and "I Pledge My Love."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white silk organza with a bodice trimmed with beaded pearl applique and Bishop sleeves with lace edging on cuffs. The bottom of the gown had a ruffle flounce of Alencon lace and a cathedral length train. Her headpiece was a Juliet cap of white pearls with a fingertip veil of illusion net. She carried a cascade of white silk roses, white tiger lilies, white and lavender miniature orchids with silk ivy and fresh baby's breath.

Elizabeth Hickcox of Waltham was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Debbie O'Leary, Terri O'Rourke, Ann Marie Heckman and Bonnie Burke. Their gowns were fashioned of Quiana in vivid orchid enhanced with a cowl neckline and short ruffled cap sleeves. They wore a small flower in their hair and carried cascades of pale pink silk roses, magenta tiger lilies, lavender miniature orchids, with fresh purple statice and baby's breath.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Milley chose a full length gown in mauve chiffon with v-necked tucked bodice. Mrs. Hoffman wore a gown of aqua chiffon with ruffled neckline and long sleeves with ruffle at wrists.

One hundred fifty guests attended the reception at Fantasia in Cambridge. Mrs. Millie Milley, sister-in-law of the bride, was in charge of the guest book.

Following a trip to Hawaii, the couple will reside in Ferndale, Washington.

Mr. Hoffman is a graduate of Austin Prep. and Northeastern University and is presently employed with U.S. Customs in Blaine, Washington.

A solar collector has been developed by General Electric that could triple the heat collection of a flat-plate collector. Black fiberglass fibers inside cylindrical vacuum tubes (fastened to a panel) absorb and transfer heat to air circulating in the tubes. The fibers receive nearly twice the sunlight as a flat collector. Massachusetts Audubon points out.

Fulbright Scholar, Family, Prepare For Africa Study

By John P. Sawyer

You know you're on the equator when the sun rises and sets the same time every day — Irving Gershenberg.

He's a professor of economics at UMass Boston. She's Andover's early childhood education specialist.

Together with their children, they reside at 162 Lowell St.

But their second home is Africa.

The Gershenbergs have visited and lived on the continent twice — and they'll be returning for another year's stay this August.

Professor Gershenberg has been awarded a Fulbright grant by the Board of Foreign Scholarships and the U.S. International Communication Agency. He will teach economic development and planning at the University of Nairobi, Kenya, for the 1982-83 academic year. He will also collect data for a study on the training of Kenyan managers.

His wife, Linnea, hopes to serve as an educational consultant and establish a testing service for pre-school children.

Their own children will also be going along. Aaron, 20, will enroll at Nairobi University where he will continue his studies in economics and math. He is a student at Wesleyan University.

Lisa, who graduated from Andover High School this week, has been granted a deferred admission to Curry College and may also take some courses in Africa.

Sarah, a sophomore at Andover High, will take her junior year in Nairobi.

Africa is not new to the Gershenbergs. They lived two years in Kampala, Uganda (1969-71) and two years in Kenya (1974-76).

Here's how it became a home away from home.

While working on his Ph.D. in economics at the University of California at Berkeley, Irving Gershenberg became interested in the economic development of less developed countries. Studying American economic history stimulated that interest.

Because he was, in his words, a "terrible language student," he had to do his field work in English-speaking countries, such as French colonial Africa. As a child, Professor Gershenberg had done much reading on Africa. There was always something "unknown" about the continent that made it attractive, and he always wanted to visit there.

Off To Africa

The Gershenberg family will soon be leaving for a year of study in Africa under a Fulbright Scholarship awarded to Irving Gershenberg, a professor at UMass/Boston. From left, Lisa, 19, Linnea, early childhood educator in Andover schools, Sarah, 16, and Irving. Standing, Aaron, 20.

He got a job at Makerere University in Kampala, Uganda, teaching economic development and planning and helping to write the government's third five-year development plan.

Linnea became a research assistant at the Makerere Institute of Social Research. That's where

HARRIET AHOUSE
REPRESENTATIVE

My campaign for state representative is committed to reach out to meet you — and to let you get to know me. Since there are so many of you, I will probably not be able to meet each of you personally. To assist you in getting to know me, I am regularly buying space in the Townsman to present this column.

As I have campaigned over the last few months, the question I am most asked is "What is the district?"

The 17th Essex District contains all of Andover and portions of south Lawrence and Tower Hill. Primary election day is September 14. The last day to register before the primary is August 17th.

The hottest topic on Beacon Hill is the state budget for the 1983 fiscal year which begins July 1st. I'll be focusing on budget issues in my next two columns.

she became interested in early childhood development. She helped to set up the Nangabo Self Help Center — a nursery school and teacher-training center — now celebrating its 15th year.

"I think it's the only building in the area that has electricity," she said.

The Gershenberg children were six, five and two and one-half years old respectively.

The family lived in university housing, made of cement because of the termites. Cockroaches were also a problem, but according to Linnea, there were "less mosquitos than Andover has."

The weather was never hotter than 75-80 degrees, but very humid, on the equator. The area had two wet and two dry seasons per year. Professor Gershenberg was impressed with the many flowering trees, snowcapped mountains and the "fantastic" differences in temperatures, fauna and animals.

Linnea noted there were 25 languages in Uganda, which makes it very difficult to unify a country. She said the western influence was evident in various ways, such as Africans using modern medicine for some ailments and witchcraft for others.

Although Professor Gershenberg said the family was healthier in Uganda than in this country, he got malaria, with sharp headaches and pain behind the eyes. Sarah, the youngest, also came down with malaria — but not before the family had returned to the United States, where the sickness was difficult to diagnose.

Children in Uganda and Kenya are still susceptible to sicknesses such as polio, and the population is terribly poor, according to Professor Gershenberg, who said there is a high infant mortality rate there. He also said the ratio of people per doctor country-wide is 12,000 to 1, as compared to 700 to 1 in this country.

"It was only after we left," said Professor Gershenberg, "that the conditions began to deteriorate rapidly."

When the family returned to the United States, the professor taught at Rutgers University, and Linnea attained her masters degree in early childhood education. They lived in New Jersey.

But after three years, according to Professor Gershenberg, "I felt it was time to get going again."

This time, it was off to Kenya, where he did much the same work he had done in Uganda — but this time at the University of Nairobi. To show the extreme inequality in income distribution, he noted that the top 20 per cent income earners in Kenya earn 67 per cent of the country's total income. In the United States, he said that number is 34 per cent.

Professor Gershenberg said he enjoyed Uganda more than Kenya, because there was less of a colonial "overhang" or "impress." The number of British in Uganda was small, and Uganda never had its land taken by Britain, he said. In Kenya, the best land was taken over and given to the British, who had more control there than they did in Uganda, according to Gershenberg.

Capital cities in Africa, such as Nairobi (pop. 1 million), were modern European cities. Aaron was barmitzva'd in Kenya. He said on a typical Saturday, he could play pinball and go to the movies, such as an American might do. Horse racing was popular on Sundays. (There was no horse racing in Uganda, because of the tsetse flies.)

The Gershenberg children attended both public and private schools in Africa. But these were quality city schools, with the student population one-third Asian, one-third European (including American) and one-third African.

A more typical school outside the city, said Professor Gershenberg, might have 60-100 students in one classroom, no books or blackboards, and lessons written in the sand. He said 45 per cent of the adult population in Kenya is illiterate.

The Fulbright award will take Gershenberg and his family back to Nairobi. The intent of the award is to bring the peoples of America and less developed countries together to promote understanding, he said, and also probably to promote political support of others in the world by providing assistance.

Linnea will be working to develop childhood education.

"The vast majority of the country," she said, "has no early childhood education at all."

The idea, she explained, is to disseminate the training and learning beyond the rich to the entire country. Although there is poverty we don't think about here — naked babies in the slums — there is expertise among the African population and well-trained Africans, according to Linnea, who said education and training must be spread to more people.

"It's not the jungle," she noted, and unlike the Tarzan image many of us may have, there are big hospitals in Africa, for example — but there's no way to transport the population to them.

Professor Gershenberg is not optimistic about the prospects for African development.

"The...energy crisis has reduced the chances for rapid economic development of African countries," he said.

Most African countries today need 40-70 percent of foreign exchange earnings to purchase fuel to run their power plants, according to Gershenberg. Before the 1973 oil crisis, more foreign exchange resources could be allocated to enlarging the industrial base and improving agricultural development.

Assuming no change in the policies of the developed world towards the under-developed world in terms of sharing wealth and technology, he said, "The possibilities are limited," and much emphasis will be aimed at regional grouping of third world countries.

The problem with this, he said, is the animosity among many groups of countries, and many countries producing competitive rather than complementary products. Because of this, according to the professor, even if some African countries form an economic union, they wouldn't be able to influence world market prices.

"That's why I'm pessimistic," he said.

He noted, however, that 20 years ago, many people were pessimistic about social and economic development in Africa, and yet there has been appreciable advancement. However, Gershenberg points to Libya — a country that was given no chance for economic development until they struck oil. Libya is still under-developed, he said, but more affluent. In Nigeria, he said, a small group of people have become wealthy.

"Economic growth is very different than economic development," Gershenberg said. Economic growth refers to national income and has nothing to do with the distribution of that income or social services. "Economic growth has been much more prevalent in the world, while economic development is still a rarity."

To Honor Graduates At Vale

The Ballard Vale United Church, United Methodist, United Church of Christ, will honor its high school graduates at a special service Sunday at 10 a.m. This year's graduates are Todd McCleod, James Cassidy, Terry Burke, Lynn Ann Baker, Melanie Cassell, Atsuko Matasumoto, Yukari Oda, Thomas Tellier and Jacqueline Ward. Mrs. Kathy Baker is the general chairperson for this event. A luncheon will be served at the parsonage for the graduates and their families.

The summer church school program begins Sunday for all children with "Heroes and Heroines of Faith" as its theme. The children will worship with their families and, after the Word for Children, they will be dismissed for their learning activities. This Sunday they will meet and learn about Ruth and Naomi.

Rainbows is the theme for the service. The Rev. Gary S. Cornell, pastor, will preach on "A Rainbow of Gifts" and the choir, under the direction of James Sayers, will sing "The Lord Made A Rainbow" as its Offertory.

The church is located at 23 Clark Road, Andover.

Christian Scientists In Session

Christian Scientists from all over the United States and many countries overseas were in Boston recently to attend the 87th annual meeting of their denomination and to hear a strong appeal for spiritual courage in the face of world-wide dangers.

Michael B. Thorne, chairman of The Christian Science board of directors, declared, "There is a great yearning throughout the world for the elimination of nuclear dangers, and the only answer to this yearning lies in an understanding of God and of the power of God. Nothing less can guide thought and action to solutions not yet seen."

The Church of Christ, Scientist was founded in Boston in 1879. It now includes branch churches in 56 countries, 73 congregations in Massachusetts and 90 elsewhere in New England. The meetings included three inspirational sessions plus reports on the church's publishing, membership and informational activities.

Details were given of the current "secondary uses" of its newspaper, The Christian Science Monitor, through print and radio syndication and a television news format test program.

A theme stressed was that "Christendom has its work cut out for it in these times, and this will demand courage, wisdom and universal love."

Dorothy E. Klein of Brookline, a Christian Science practitioner and teacher, is president of the church.

Chiropractic and headaches

In today's high pressure world it should come as no surprise that complaints related to headaches are responsible for more visits to physicians' offices than any other condition. Tons of aspirin and over the counter headache medications are consumed by Americans everyday! The sad truth is that aspirin merely masks the pain and does nothing to correct the underlying cause.

Pain is the warning system of the body and as such warrants attention. Ignoring pain or masking it with "pain killers" is comparable to disconnecting the oil light on your car's dashboard in lieu of adding the proper oil and maintenance. A little care will prevent a far greater problem from arising in the future. Protect your body and find the underlying cause. Oftentimes, headaches are the result of structural misalignment or muscular tension and as such may be correctable under chiropractic care. Call to arrange for a chiropractic consultation and exam.

Four Get Duke Degrees

Four Andover residents recently graduated from Duke University in Durham, South Carolina.

They were: Catherine Louise Iacobo, daughter of Judge Anthony and Josephine Iacobo, 25 Karlton Circle; Barbara Owen Clarke, daughter of Mr. William T. Clarke, 2 Random Lane; Douglas Eugene Mesler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Mesler, 12 Fulton Road; and Daniel Welsh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Welsh, 199 River Road.

Catherine Iacobo graduated magna cum laude with a B.S. in mechanical engineering. She was a member of Kappa Delta Sorority and plans to work for IBM in Charlotte, N.C. She is a 1978 graduate of Andover High School.

Barbara Clarke, a 1978 Andover High School graduate, was also awarded a B. S. in mechanical engineering. She sang in the Duke University Chapel Choir and played violin in the Symphony Orchestra. She is a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and plans to attend law school in Boston.

Douglas Mesler graduated summa cum laude and majored in chemistry and philosophy. He was recently named as one of eight national recipients of the Winston Churchill Scholarship, which sponsors one year's study at Cambridge University in Cambridge, England, culminating in a Master of Philosophy degree.

At Duke, he participated in intramural sports and worked at the University Medical Center. He plans to seek a degree in Pharmacology and enter medical school.

That's where the situation enters the political arena.

Gershenberg doesn't see Africa as necessarily a trouble spot for the United States in the future. Foreign powers, he said, are tolerated, but not welcomed, and African nations desire economic independence. Gershenberg noted a Cuban "military presence" in Ethiopia and Angola. Although he knows of no Soviet military presence, he said there are Soviet advisors and economic missions in Africa, as there are American ones.

In Ethiopia, he said, the United States, Cuba and the Soviet Union are all providing assistance to a socialist government, while Ethiopia is engaged against an interior region of their country which is seeking autonomy. So sometimes there isn't the conflict many people might believe there is between the three major powers in Africa, according to the professor.

In a little more than one month, the Gershenbergs will be returning to their second home.

Sarah has continued to write to her friends in Africa. She plans to do much travelling to get to know the country again.

Few people have adventured on steamer-safari across Lake Victoria, as the Gershenbergs have.

"I'm just really excited," she said. "It's like taking my junior year abroad."

And as Linnea puts it, the goal of the trip will be to go to Africa as educated people, to share their expertise and make friends abroad.

Organist To Present Recital

Donna Merrill will present a recital on the old Boston Music Hall organ on Wednesday, June 23, at 8:30 p.m. For her program she has chosen "Prelude and fugue in e minor," Nicolaus Bruhns; "Chorale Prelude: Jesu Leiden, Pein und Tod," Johann Caspar Vogler; "Sonata I in f minor, Op. 65," Felix Mendelssohn; "Pieces de Fantaisie: Clair de Lune, Op. 53, Intermezzo, Op. 51," Louis Vierne; "Fantasie und fugue uber Bach, Op. 46," Max Reger.

Merrill, music director at Central Congregational Church, Worcester, received her Bachelor of Music degree from Boston University and her Master of the arts degree from Clark University, Worcester. She has studied organ with George Faxon and Clarence Watters and is studying organ with Barclay Wood and piano with Leo Abbott. Merrill is instructor of organ and theory at the Performing Arts School of Worcester.

The Boston Music Hall organ was the first concert organ to come to the United States and it became the pride of Boston. Nevertheless, 21 years later, to make room for the expanding Boston Symphony Orchestra, it was put in storage until the late E.F. Searles of Methuen purchased it. Methuen Memorial Music Hall, an imposing building with exquisite Baroque ornamentation, was erected to house it. Entirely rebuilt, the organ was rededicated in 1909 before a private audience. Not until July 1926 were the people of Greater Lawrence admitted to the hall when it was opened in connection with the 200th anniversary of the Town of Methuen.

Organist John H. Corrie will perform on Wednesday, June 30.

Restaurant Addition Is Denied

The Zoning Board of Appeals has denied a variance for the 99 Restaurant and stated a proposed addition at the facility would be a "detriment to the public good."

Atty. Carmine DiAdamo, representing Androck Trust (99 Restaurant), had appeared before the Board at a public hearing in early May requesting a variance or special permit to construct an addition to the restaurant's kitchen.

This would have allowed the basement kitchen facility to be moved upstairs and a new waste treatment system to be placed in the new basement. The Memtik system proposed to discharge clean water into the present leaching field.

The local Board of Health had asked the 99 Restaurant to change its septic system, DiAdamo said, but the restaurant had violated no rules.

The Board of Health had also asked the restaurant to improve part of its kitchen operation, according to the Zoning Board decision.

But the decision on the variance read, "...the Board finds that granting a variance to expand an additional 24 per cent of area would be a detriment to the public good."

Other reasons stated were:

- "...the Board finds that no hardship was claimed or has been demonstrated by the Petitioner to justify expanding by 24 per cent of the present structural area."

- "...the Petitioner states both the Memtik System and kitchen facility relief can be confined within the allowed 10 per cent expansion from the original area of the previous structure."

- "The Board makes no finding as to what percentage, if any, the Petitioner is now entitled to enlarge the existing structure since the present structure has already been increased in volume and area over the original non-conforming building."

- "No hardship is owing to soil conditions, shape or topography of the land or structure."

"The petition for a special permit," according to the Board, "will be dealt with in a separate decision."

At the public hearing, Richard Donovan, 456 Lowell St., had alleged septic system outflow from the 99 Restaurant surfaces in a manner that is "scary" and seeps into Haggett's Pond — the town's source of drinking water.

He said he could dig 1½ feet in his own land and strike water. He also complained of odor and noted how often the septic tank has to be pumped out.

Donovan said he believed a kitchen addition might increase the number of patrons at the restaurant and lead to more use of the new septic system. He questioned how the soil could handle discharge water.

Donovan and other neighbors also complained about the parking situation at the restaurant and alleged noise and refuse strewn on the ground outside.

The Zoning Board viewed the restaurant on Saturday, May 8.

They found there was "adequate" parking for the 104-seat capacity license. They also found the portion of the kitchen in the basement was "very cramped both in area and overhead (with exposed pipes directly over the food preparation area)."

"Vent pipes from the septic system are immediately adjacent to Mr. Donovan's farm," according to the Board. "The leaching field is completely covered by hot topped parking space."

The Board also found "evidence of trash strewn along the Donovan property."

Zoning Board Denies Appeal By Art Gallery

By John P. Sawyer

A local art gallery owner's appeal to keep his business in Andover has come up short.

The Zoning Appeals Board has denied Howard Yezerksi, 75 Park St., a variance which would have allowed him to operate Andover Art Gallery out of his home. It is presently located at 91 North Main St.

Asked what he might do, Yezerksi said this week, "I don't know, really..."

The Board stated that Yezerksi's primary reasons for seeking the variance — "his inability to pay the rent increase sought by the Gallery's present landlord" and "the absence in Andover of suitably located commercial property which could be leased at a rental affordable by him" — do not constitute a "hardship within the meaning of the Zoning By-Law which would justify the granting of a Use Variance."

Yezerksi's neighborhood, where he had proposed to move his business into his home, is zoned Single Residence A.

"We sort of put everything on hold until the decision," he said, explaining he hasn't come up "with anything concrete" as far as future plans are concerned. He is still looking for space in Andover.

Yezerksi will soon hear from his landlord "what he has in mind" as to when the Andover Gallery of Fine Art might have to move.

The local businessman is not sure a commercial art gallery is viable in Andover, considering the space required to operate.

"It's difficult to carry that overhead," he said, when you're selling art in a non-urban area.

When you're the only business in town (that sells art)...I don't think that's good," Yezerksi noted, explaining that three or four commercial galleries in town might generate more interest.

Although he said he would "hate to move out of town," after having operated here for 14 years, he said he "probably would" look for suitable space elsewhere if nothing does come up in Andover.

At the public hearing held in early May, Yezerksi claimed businessmen like himself are being forced out of town because of the lack of suitable or affordable space.

Realtor Liz Cohen told the Board there is a "terrible shortage" of space in Andover, noting, "We are 30,000 people, and we want to look like a little village."

The Andover Center Merchants Association, led by Chairman Richard Chapel of Andover Photo, has spoken out in favor of central business district expansion and is seeking anyone interested in studying the idea.

In denying a variance for Yezerksi, the Board noted, "If there is a shortage of available commercial property existing in the General Business District of Andover...it is not the duty of the Board to relieve the shortage by permitting commercial uses in surrounding residential areas unless there is a basis under the By-Law and the General Laws of the Commonwealth for doing so."

"The size and nature of the Central Business District of Andover is a matter for consideration by the Planning Board, the Town Government, the local merchants, interested citizens, and ultimately for determination by the residents of Andover in town meeting."

The Board recognized that most of Yezerksi's neighbors who attended the public hearing supported the granting of a variance. Arguments, said the Board, centered upon the need to enlarge the central business district and the importance of the Andover Gallery of Fine Art as a community cultural and educational resource.

Many people spoke at the hearing, according to the Board. "The basic theme of their comments was in support of the proposition that the Gallery is a cultural resource in Andover."

The Board's decision does not argue with that proposition and states, "...No doubt every effort should be made to keep it in Andover."

But according to the decision, Yezerksi was only paying about half ($4 per square foot) of the average rent of offices in the building where his business is located, and the rent was to be doubled.

Further, the Board stated "Petitioner's lot (home) is located approximately 110 feet easterly from the boundary of the general business and residential zones. There was no evidence presented at the hearing indicating that the use of petitioner's property for residential purposes is substantially impaired as a result of the property's proximity to the general business district."

The Board found that to grant a variance and permit a commercial use in a residentially zoned area "in the absence of evidence that the premises cannot be used as a residence would substantially derogate from the intent and purpose of the Zoning

By-Law."

In addition, the Board, in recognizing Yezerksi's attempt to find another location for his business, maintained the gallery owner believed a second floor establishment might not be fruitful for the frame shop he also runs.

Mr. Yezerksi stated that with the help of a local realtor he had conducted a search in the Andover area for suitable space and had been unable to find space at a rent which his business could afford or a location which he believed would be satisfactory for the operation of the frame shop," the decision stated. "It is his view that if the frame shop is located on the second floor of a building potential customers will not patronize the shop."

(Whether or not this is in fact the case,

Exhibit

An exhibition of more than 300 ethnographic and historic artifacts exploring the richness and scope of Hawaiian culture through the ages.

"Hawaii: The Royal Isles" will be on view at the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston through August 8. These objects have never before been exhibited outside the Bishop Museum in Honolulu. The exhibition was organized and developed by the Bernice Pauahi Bishop Museum, Honolulu, and made possible with support from the National Endowment for the Humanities and United Airlines.

The exhibition traces the thousand-year evolution of Hawaiian society from ancient chiefdoms through dynastic monarchies to the modern state. It examines the ways in which traditional Hawaiian culture, philosophy and the arts have persisted even after two centuries of European and American influence beginning with the discovery of Hawaii in 1778 by the English navigator Captain James Cook.

Six Teachers, Advisor Returned To School Budget For '83

By Sue Aucella Deacon

By approving in principle, although not in final detail, the transfer of more than $80,000 among various accounts, the School Committee was able to put funding for six teaching positions and one new program advisor back into their fiscal '83 budget this week.

The net change in the teaching salary account at this point is approximately $56,633.

Business Manager Francis Paul explained that the line item changes were possible because he has used a $300,000 surplus in the fiscal 1982 budget to purchase supplies and equipment for next year that were included in the 1983 budget.

Paul said he would return to the committee next week with final figures for next year's budget — and possibly with more funds to return more teachers to the staff.

After voting unanimously to accept the administration's recommendations on the line item transfers, the committee also voted unanimously to accept recommendations on which positions to return to the teaching staff with the newly-available funds.

Asst. Supt. Charles Mitsakos recommended returning one librarian at Andover High School; one full-time chemistry teacher and one half-time biology teacher to the high school science department; one halftime mathematics teacher at the high school; one primary-level teacher at West Elementary and one intermediate-level teacher at Sanborn; and a teacher of the perceptually handicapped (to be funded with federal funds).

He also recommended creating the new position of reading program advisor, with funds from the AIRS Dissemination Diffusion project and Title I paying the $28,652 salary, instead of combining the reading and language arts program advisor positions.

Mitsakos reported that combining those two positions would "create a position that would be next to impossible to fulfill by one person." And by not returning the language arts program advisor to the classroom, the administration could retain an English teacher who would have been "bumped" — saving an additional $4,680 in unemployment compensation.

Sorry! It's Going To Rain

By John P. Sawyer

Rain, rain, go away...

Well, it has — at least for the time being. But as if we haven't had enough water fall from the sky in the past few weeks, clouds and showers are predicted for tomorrow. So buckle up.

It all started on Memorial Day weekend — a total washout. And then came June. We've had over eight inches of rain this month. The average is about three inches. We may be headed for a record rainfall for the 30-day period.

As for Gov. King's Water Conservation Week, which was this week, June 7-13, well...at this point, nobody wants to hear about shallow reservoirs and predicted water shortages.

Many of us are still fixing leaky ceilings and cleaning up flooded cellars.

But the northeaster that dumped so much rain upon New England this month was even more serious than that.

At least 22 people have been reported either dead or missing in the six-state region. In Connecticut, floods forced 1,300 people to flee their homes. About $100 million in damage is estimated, and a state of emergency was declared, as was in Rhode Island. Bridges and roads have been washed out and dams destroyed.

In Andover, several hundred sandbags were piled at the Riverina Road pumping station to combat flooding. The Shawsheen River is reported four to five feet above normal.

Public Works Director Robert McQuade said emergency pumps were brought in at the Riverina station to handle the flow. Water came within eight inches of the highest mark ever, according to McQuade, who said the town's sewer and drainage systems were working at full capacity.

Although things are pretty much back to normal now, public works crews worked Saturday night through Monday night, he said. Emergency pumps at the Riverina station were still manned Tuesday night.

Other than the many calls received about cellar flooding, major problems in Andover were the flooded DASA parking lot off Stevens Street, and River Street in Ballardvale, which had to be closed due to flooding conditions just before Lowell Junction, according to the public works director.

About 2,000 residents in the Shawsheen section of town had electrical power disrupted in their homes, the outages caused by fallen tree limbs. Power outages also occurred in North Andover and Haverhill.

Many high school graduations in the Greater Lawrence area were forced indoors over the weekend. Over 450 Andover High graduates attended their commencement Monday at Case Memorial College at Phillips Academy.

On another note, the rainfall, which could damage this summer's crops (and result in higher prices at the market), might actually help the gypsy moths.

Pesticides sprayed against the moth caterpillars may have been washed off trees by the heavy rains. Spraying may have to be done again.

And if all the bad news isn't enough, there was yet another aspect of the early June monsoon. It was depressing.

Outdoor activity was definitely "out." Shopping malls in Methuen and Salem N.H., were crowded all weekend. Movie theatres did a big business.

Cabin fever strikes again.

Considering New England's unpredictable weather, be glad for the sunny respite of the past few days.

Enjoy today.

Bob Giata of the Andover Water department mans the pumps at the Riverina Road Pumping Station which were running from Saturday through Tuesday night in order to keep the town's sewer system operational due to the rising Shawsheen River.

It Is Spring Isn't It?

While reviewing plans for the construction of an Ark, and confident that the monsoon season is reserved mostly to the area of the Orient, there still remain some question as to whether this is really spring in New England.

Ruined weekends, hurried arrangements to move graduation exercises inside, cellars turning into unanticipated indoor pools, could certainly lead one to wonder if, indeed, there will be a spring or summer season hereabouts.

Having had rain spoil any planned recreational or other activities the last four out of five weekends, it seems appropriate to search for some reassuring signs that better weather and vacation conditions are on the way, offering as evidence the following:

The emergence of those orange and white barrells with blinking yellow lights which will make your trip to any resort area precarious from now through at least September. They have reappeared at just the proper time along Massachusetts highways, where it is characteristically easier to go back and rebuild superhighways than to construct and engineer them right in the first place.

In Andover, talk of getting construction underway on Elm Square improvements indicates that the project should get underway sometime in August. This is a sure sign of the advent of spring or summer, since this particular maze has been talked about and planned for the past decade. Hopefully the work will get underway and be finished before the Christmas holidays and probably will, if the construction crews can get their equipment through the square in the first place.

Also, in Andover and throughout the general area, another sure sign of the season is the appearance of beer bottles strewn along roadsides from passing cars with little regard for personal property, or the safety of others. It's generally an empty six-pack, empty cardboard casing and all, just flung from the car window as the automobile is revved and races away.

This is likewise the season when idiots bloom. The species is identified by a person swigging a can of beer while the car is traversing the highways and byways of the land, either by driver or rider. The legislature is currently considering a stiff fine for such practice and such action is highly recommended.

There are some other omens of a better season, such as the gypsy moth caterpillars getting bigger and munching more avariciously, and the Andover mosquito beginning to take hold of everyone's back yard or recreation area once again.

And, there are all sorts of reasoning being put forth to explain why the weather has been so horrendous, such as the fallout from Mt. St. Helen's volcano still hovering in the atmosphere, and the space shuttle flight fouling up the natural order of things. Meteorologists (they were once called weathermen) indicated that its lows crashing against highs or vice versa.

The only thing that has been certain through it all is that there's really nothing we can do about it, but grin and bear it, assured that things are bound to get better. All the signs are there.

To be in a more positive frame of mind, think that all this wet weather may well be nature getting it out of its system to insure that your annual sojourn from the workaday world later this summer may be guaranteed sun-soaked.

A Tribute To Wil Hixon

To The Editor Of The TOWNSMAN:

It has been tradition in the past to recognize, at the annual Andover High senior awards banquet, the member of the faculty to whom the Andover High yearbook is being dedicated. Unfortunately, this year was unprecedented. The 1982 Andover yearbook is in tribute to Mr. Wil Hixon, but this was not apparent at our senior banquet on May 28.

Having worked closely with Mr. Hixon for the past year, I can appreciate the opening descriptions of him in the yearbook tribute: "very intense! fair! tough! a nice guy!" He is certainly all four of these and much more. When first meeting Mr. Hixon, in the dreaded detention line in sophomore year, I was truly frightened of him. By participating in school affairs with him, however, I have come to trust him as my close friend and confidante.

Mr. Hixon, both as assistant principal and as a coach, insists on honesty and fairness toward every individual. Being disciplinarian, I imagine, is not an easy job. Mr. Hixon, however, allows tough, but fair, treatment of all students. His coaching experience, as a "very distinguished and dynamic coach," can only begin to be measured by his excellent 440-136 win-loss record.

In the yearbook Mr. Hixon is quoted as saying, "I've been blessed that I've been around the kids I have and seen them to be successful later in life." To Mr. Hixon, both personally and publicly, I would like to say that I have been blessed that I have been around Mr. Hixon because he has taught me the admirable qualities of respect, integrity and dedication.

I hope that at future Andover High senior awards banquets, the tradition of honoring the yearbook tribute recipient will resume. As in the case of Mr. Wil Hixon, such fine people should not go unrecognized at the celebration of the graduating seniors.

A First Step

To The Editor Of The TOWNSMAN:

Speaking for the working committee of Concerned Parents, our main concern has been the welfare of our children at West and the welfare of the educational system throughout Andover. At the school committee meeting of May 25, 1982, we were pleased to see the administration and the school committee begin to correct some of the inconsistencies of services at West. At that time some statements were also made which we wish to address as merely clarifying the issues at hand.

First of all, great concern was voiced over preconceived notions regarding the labeling of children in the traditional program. Children in the contemporary program have been hurt by labels as well. It is time to put an end to labeling and time to look at them as children whose educational needs we are obligated to meet in as fair and equitable a way as our resources will allow. Let us even do away with the labels of "contemporary" and "traditional" and call them "Andover students!" In this instance, the only way to put a stop to "warring camps" is to eliminate them both. We cannot place parents and children in categories that do not exist. With this in mind we now call ourselves Concerned Parents For Andover Education.

Secondly, a traditional program representative read a lengthy description of the traditional program. A more accurate description would best have come for personnel involved in the teaching or administration of the program than from parents who provided "their" interpretation. When checked, a number of statements regarding grade level tests, below grade level instruction and social promotion were found to be misleading, and others false. For instance, if a child is already working at his capacity, would retention serve in his best interest? Regardless of which program, such children do exist and are necessarily socially promoted; some teaching is done by aides; children do travel to other areas of the building for academic instruction; and whether a child sits in his or stands in a line, waiting does occur.

Finally, we do not presume to offer educational alternatives alone. Our taxes are paying educational professionals to that end. Our votes have placed five committee members in the administrative position to decide for Andover the course of our educational system. Ultimately, decisions come down to their five votes. We, as parents, will participate in the process. Therefore, we believe that the formation of a committee composed of parents and teachers and administrators and school committee members to air all the allegations and establish, once and for all, what educational system does in fact exist in Andover is essential. Without that first step, the proposed committee will surely stumble and fall. Having done that, to then seek educational alternatives aimed at meeting the full spectrum of needs of a unified student body is a step in the right direction.

WEEKLY SPECIAL

There's a glimmer of light at end of economic tunnel

By JACK ANDERSON and JOE SPEAR

WASHINGTON -- The first faint signs of an economic recovery are becoming visible. So far, it is merely a glimmer at the end of a dark tunnel. And some economists fear it may be the headlight of an onrushing express train. But the light is there.

The auto industry is calling back workers. They have contracts to build more trucks and tanks for the armed forces. But they are also producing better cars, which hopefully will sell.

For the fifth straight month, more new homes are under construction. Air travel is also increasing. A boom appears to be developing in the telecommunications industry.

The increase in defense spending should stimulate the economies of at least 10 states: California, Texas, New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Missouri, Virginia, Florida, Louisiana and Washington.

President Reagan's tax cuts and the cost-of-living increases in Social Security benefits will also take effect in July. This will put more money in the pockets of consumers. The great hope is that the extra money and the economic stimulation will open up their pockets.

Maybe they will now go out and buy the homes, automobiles, furniture and appliances that they couldn't afford last winter. Even a mild spending spree could start an economic upturn.

Unfortunately, there is also bad news that could dampen a recovery. Ten million people are still out of work. The industrial states of the north are particularly hard hit. And during the first two months of 1982, more than 3,500 companies had to close. That is a 55 percent increase over the same period a year earlier. The trend is grim.

But Americans are incurable optimists, and this may make the difference between boom or bust.

SPIES-IN-THE-SKY: In the battle for the Falkland Islands, Argentine pilots and submarine commanders have set their sights on Britain's two aircraft carriers and the troopship Queen Elizabeth 2. The Argentine junta is reported to feel that sinking one of these big ships would help even the score.

The Soviet Union is playing an important role in this Argentine strategy. We have seen top-secret details of the Kremlin's behind-the-scenes help to Argentina in the South Atlantic war.

The Russians have been giving Argentina important information on the British fleet. Soviet satellites have been pinpointing the location of British warships for the Argentines.

The most important Soviet spy-in-the-sky is the Cosmos 1365, which was sent into orbit on May 15. It is a nuclear-powered radar satellite specifically designed for ocean surveillance. A top-secret CIA report has this to say about the Cosmos 1365 satellite:

"These satellites have been able to identify coastlines, ships and prominent terrain features. The radar on these satellites is able to detect ships the size of a destroyer when weather conditions are good, and ships the size of an aircraft carrier when weather conditions are bad."

We are told that these super-satellites have a relatively short life -- a minimum of two months. After that, booster rockets are supposed to propel the nuclear-powered part of the spy satellite far into space, where they will remain in orbit for at least a hundred years.

But when the Soviets' Cosmos 1365 satellite is operating at peak efficiency, it has remarkable surveillance power. Our intelligence sources say it can spot an aircraft carrier 90 percent of the time, a cruiser 50 percent of the time and even a warship as small as a frigate 30 percent of the time.

The last important crisis that led to the launching of a Soviet nuclear spy satellite was in the spring of 1980. That was five days after the United States launched its ill-fated Iranian rescue mission. The 37-ship American task force in the Persian Gulf had managed to give Soviet spy trawlers the slip, so the Russians sent up one of their nuclear satellites.

That's what makes the use of another nuclear satellite so significant. It shows that the Soviets consider the Falklands war important.

HEADLINES AND FOOTNOTES: American-operated AWACS radar planes in Saudi Arabia have had a couple of close calls recently. Intelligence sources say it was only by luck that one of the planes wasn't destroyed by Libyan guerrillas at an isolated airfield. A security guard spotted a hole in a fence which led to the commandos. This was the second unsuccessful Libyan attempt to blow up the planes since March.

Labor Secretary Ray Donovan's former construction firm has hired private detectives to investigate the Senate investigators who are looking into his alleged ties to organized crime. One of the detectives is Robert Shortley, a former FBI agent who has done work for the Republican National Committee. Shortley's wife, it turns out, is a special assistant in the White House.

Federal employees who leave Uncle Sam's payroll often find the welcome mat is out in private industry. Employers believe that former government workers can use their old friends to get lucrative contracts. Last year, the number of Defense Department employees who left for greener corporate pastures shot up by 50 percent.

Art Exhibit

More than 400 pieces of rarely-displayed, large-scale artwork will make a powerful impression at the Main Gallery, City Hall, Boston. "Art on a Grand Scale," an exhibition by artist members of The Copley Society of Boston, will open June 10 and continue through July 29. The public is invited at no charge, Monday through Friday 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Paintings, prints, sculpture, photographs, many too large to be shown outside the artist's studios will be on exhibit. Of special interest to corporate and private collectors, these works by regional artists will illustrate the vast diversity of styles, media and techniques being used by contemporary artists.

Kitchen Design

David A. Clement,

The kitchen is the focal point of a home. It is the place of food preparation and the intimate sharing of a meal. Because there is so much equipment and activity centered in it, the kitchen is usually the most remodeled room in the home. If you have decided to take this most rewarding step, allow a professional to help you plan. Design work centers carefully so as to avoid congestion. Incorporate new hinging techniques to allow for more storage area. Utilize a theme, like culinary tool displays, to give the kitchen a personal touch. Sit down with a remodeling professional to discuss your plans. You will be surprised at the amount of options at your disposal.

There are so many things you can do to create a cheerful warm and attractive kitchen. First thing WINDSOR KITCHENS asks you do is to come in to our showroom in Ward Hill at 1181 Boston Rd. on Rte. 125 just 1 1/2 mile north of Western Electric, and let us show you all we have and can do to create your dream kitchen. From lighting, plumbing, electrical, floors, ceilings, cabinets, counters -- you get the idea! We now all the ins and outs of kitchens and have over 12 years of experience in satisfying our customers in the Merrimack Valley. Call 372-3444 today or stop by Mon-Thurs 9-5:30, Fri 9-8, Sat 9-5 or other evenings by appointment.

Planners Review Subdivision

The Planning Board reviewed a proposal for a 33-lot subdivision off High Plain Road Tuesday night, one including 27 clustered and six conventional lots.

The planners did not act on the preliminary plan, Community Development and Planning Director Jonathan Gilmore said yesterday, but will discuss it during their next meeting on June 22.

Andover developer George Chongris presented the plans for "Golden Oaks", drawn by Nysten Engineering of Andover. Gilmore described the 40-acre site as "fairly dry and sandy," and said it would be served by town water and sewer.

The development would include about 10 acres of permanent green space.

A few abutters appeared at the public hearing, but offered no objections to the proposed plan, the director indicated.

Chongris had planned to exchange some green area in his adjoining Penni Lane subdivision with green space in the Golden Oaks area, but then revised the plans, eliminating the need for an exchange.

A public hearing on modifications to the Penni Lane subdivision scheduled for Tuesday night therefore became unnecessary, Gilmore said, although a number of Penni Lane abutters were present.

Although no major problems arose during the planning board hearing, the director said Public Works Director Robert McQuade is concerned about drainage on the site, and would like Chongris to build a more extensive drainage system than the developer has planned.

Earlier in their meeting, the planners spent about 90 minutes discussing "creative land development" with author Robert Lemire.

Gallery

it is difficult for the board to evaluate although the board doubts that an established business such as the frame shop offering a quality product at competitive prices would necessarily suffer merely because it moved to a second floor location in the business area.

Four members of the Zoning Appeals Board were opposed to the granting of a variance. One member believed a variance should be granted on a limited time basis so as to provide a temporary base of operation for the gallery until town meeting decides on rezoning.

Gilmore said Lemire has a number of interesting ideas that could be put to use in Andover; the director hopes to have him speak before the League of Women Voters and AVIS in the near future.

Appreciative Of Aid And Interest

The Appalachian Mountain Club and the Conservation Commission are still seeking contributions to help buy picnic tables for the town's reservations. Their goal for the month of June: $1,000.

Louise Van Everen of the AMC reported this week that contributions have already been coming in, and thanked townspeople for "their deep and sincere interest and generous contributions."

The AMC Club will be soliciting donations during the upcoming Sidewalk Bazaar; or contributions may be sent to Mrs. Van Everen, special account, at 77 School St., Andover.

Anniversary

ECLC Learning Center will celebrate the tenth year of their Early Childhood Education and Day Care Program on June 10 from 5 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. Parents and children will bring a picnic supper to the birthday party which will feature a circus theme. Food treats will include cotton candy, popcorn, ice cream cones and cold drinks. Children will participate in a "Big Top" show for their parents. Pony cart rides, clowns and games will add color and entertainment to the festivities.

The ECLC Early Childhood Learning Center, which began in the fall of 1972, provides an educational and child care program for children ages two to six.

Students Appeal To Retain Teacher

High School Spanish teacher William Kolbe has unfortunately found himself on the lay-off list this spring, a victim of school budget-cutting. But he may find some comfort in knowing that hundreds of Andover High students are in his corner.

AHS junior John Deeran Tuesday night presented a petition on Kolbe's behalf to the School Committee. The petition was signed by some 500 students.

"We urge you to reconsider Mr. Kolbe's dismissal," Deeran told the committee. "He is a gifted teacher who has had a very positive influence on all his students. He has a unique teaching ability."

The student added that Kolbe has a talent for "getting through" to even the most uninterested students, and called him "the most fluent Spanish teacher in the high school."

School Chairman Richard Neal thanked the student for "coming forward in this fashion."

We are considering the staffing needs of all the schools next year," he explained. "We were not intending to slight anyone — we have had to make some reductions throughout the system."

"We certainly will give this full consideration," he promised.

Committeeman Michael Giammusso pointed out that the committee can not consider rehiring specific individuals, for legal as well as other reasons.

But he added that the students' petition should be added to Kolbe's personnel file, regardless of what happens — and it is a document he can be proud of.

Emmanuel

Emmanuel College will host an exhibit of the works of the late Sister Vincent de Paul Curran, S.N.D., well-known artist and designer, as part of the college's celebration of its alumnae weekend on June 11-13.

Watercolors, acrylics and oils will be displayed. Much of Sister Vincent de Paul's work has never before been exhibited publicly.

Sister Vincent de Paul, a native of Worcester, attended Emmanuel College where she earned her A.B. and B.F.A. degrees.

Yankees 6 - Indians 0

Yankee pitchers Josh Malitsky and Joey Tavilla combined on a five-hitter to shutout the Indians.

The Yankees scored two runs in the second inning on walks to Tom Tormey and Paul Davies, an error, and John Davies RBI single. The Yanks put the game away in the third inning by scoring four runs. Pat Breen singled, Tim Smith doubled in one run, Tormey hit a sacrifice fly, Davies doubled and scored on Sean Bergan's double, and Bergan eventually scored on a wild pitch. Davies led the Yankee attack with two hits and a walk. Derek Camarota and John Glynn shared the mound duties for the Indians and several nice fielding plays. Matt Pothier, Brian Costello, John Glynn, Ted Andry and Jim Flowers had the Indians hits.

Yankee shortstop Pat Breen made several fine defensive plays, including an unassisted double play, while Bergan robbed an Indian batter of a base hit with a fine running catch in centerfield. The Yankees turned their second doubleplay in the game on a ground ball to second baseman Josh Malitsky, who threw to shortstop Breen to force the runner at second base. Breen's relay to first baseman Davies completed the doubleplay.

Orioles 5 - Twins 1

The first-half champion Orioles won their first game of the second half by defeating the competitive Twins 5-1.

The Oriole defense proved to be the difference as outfielders Mike Smith, John Gilmartin and Eric Hammond all made superb catches in support of Oriole pitchers Alan Reeder (2-0) and Chris Concemi (save three).

However, the play of the game came in the first inning when Oriole centerfielder Chris Nelson robbed the Twins' Billy O'Brien of a home run by making an over-the-head running catch of a deep flyball which was destined to clear the fence.

In regard to offense, the Twins opened the scoring in the first on consecutive base hits by Keith Abernathy and Mike Lane. The Orioles tied in the second when Concemi doubled home Reeder. The Orioles added three more tallies in the third with Hugh Maginnis, Concemi and Brett Hammond (his first major league basehit) providing the offense.

The twins' Keith Mercer, Scott Livemore and Peter Radulski all delivered base hits, but in each case were left stranded.

The Orioles added an insurance run in the sixth when Patrick Kelley doubled. Nelson singled and Reeder rescued Kelley with an infield hit.

Mike Lane went the route for the Twins. Kevin Henderson played his usual steady game as the Oriole shortstop and Oriole catcher Craig Knight made a fine catch of a high foul pop in the sixth.

Andover Stretches Win Streak

By Rick Harrison

Defending Greater Lawrence Babe Ruth League champion Andover Gold stretched its two-season win streak through 16 games last week, pulling out a pair of come-from-behind victories to move its early-season record to a perfect 3-0. Gold is also 43-5 in its last 48 games.

Some fine relief pitching by Billy Lane, coupled with a six-run sixth inning uprising, lifted the Gold to an 11-8 triumph over South Lawrence East at Mark Devlin Field.

Clutch two-run safeties in the fourth inning by Lane and John Leahy, plus outstanding late-inning hurling by Bill Weidman, enabled Gold to erase a 4-1 deficit enroute to a 7-4 conquest of archrival North Andover at Grogan's Field.

Andover Gold is currently in the midst of another tough week, facing South Lawrence West, North Andover and Prospect Hill, weather permitting.

Andover Gold, 11-8

The Gold crew wiped out deficits of 2-0 and 7-5 with some timely hitting, scoring five runs in the top of the second and six more in the sixth to dispatch South Lawrence East.

Billy Lane (1-0), making his Babe Ruth pitching debut, hurled six innings of seven-hit relief. The righthander permitted three earned runs, walked only two and struck out three.

SLE bolted to a 2-0 lead in the bottom of the first, using a two-out walk, a stole base and RBI singles by Ken Covey and Brian O'Neil to do the damage against Gold starter Kevin Rourke.

Rourke came back with a two-run double to highlight the Gold second, which also featured a crisp RBI double by Bill Weidman, a solid single by Lane and walks to Scott Wilkins and Chris Golsia that kept the rally alive.

East came right back with a pair of runs in the bottom of the second, as John Gagnon walked and eventually crossed on a throwing error, while Ron Lavalley singled and later came home on a catcher's interference call.

Lane was summoned in relief after Lavalley's basehit, and he worked out of further trouble by starting a perfectly-executed 1-6-3 doubleplay on Kevin Tanguay's sharp grounder to the mound. Gold Shortstop Mark Grams completed the twin killing with a fine pivot at the second base bag.

Things settled down until the East fifth when Lane experienced his only bad inning as a walk and consecutive singles by losing pitcher Joe Cutrona. Covey and O'Neil accounted for three runs and 7-5 SLE lead.

Gold sent 10 batters to the plate in the sixth. Singles by Weidman, Shane Smith and Mark Doherty set things up. Wilkins and Colson chased home runs with fielder's choice grounders. Grams ripped a two-run double and John Leahy followed with a two-run double to make it 11-7.

Covey's RBI triple to centerfield produced the final East marker in the bottom of the sixth, but Lane retired SLE in quick 1-2-3 fashion in the seventh to seal the victory.

Weidman stroked a pair of hits for Andover Gold, while catcher Shane Smith and second baseman Scott Wilkins turned in strong defensive efforts.

Covey went 3-for-4, scoring twice and collecting two RBI for East.

Andover Gold, 7-4

Righthander Bill Weidman (1-0) struggled through the first three innings against North Andover, but then settled down to retire 14 straight batters and 15 of the final 16 as Gold dispatched NA 7-4.

Weidman completed the contest with a five-hitter, walking three and whiffing six (fanning the side in the sixth), and he allowed just one ball to be hit out of the infield over the final four frames.

North Andover grabbed a quick 1-0 lead in the bottom of the first, after Gold mounted a mild threat in the top of the inning, as leadoff batter Jim Norwood walked, took second on a passed ball and scored on Mike Atwood's single to centerfield.

Gold tied it 1-1 in the second when Shane Smith drew a leadoff walk, and eventually came home on Scott Wilkins' opposite field double.

North Andover struck for three runs in the third before Weidman buckled down. NA loaded the bases on a walk to Atwood and singles by Ernie Burton and losing pitcher Chris Strobel.

Andy Heinze bounced a grounder to short and the throw home was too late as Atwood scored. Chris Abell then grounded a two-run single just inside the first base bag, taking second on the throw home.

That made it 4-1 and left two men in scoring position with no outs. However, Weidman verted further trouble on a tapper to the mound, a strikeout and another one-hopper to the mound. He was virtually untouchable thereafter, permitting just a long two-out triple to right-centerfield by Burton in the seventh.

Andover Gold won it with five runs in the fourth.

Scott Wilkins reached on an error, and two-out walks to Mark Grams and Kevin Rourke loaded the bases. Strobel had Billy Lane two strikes when the Gold shortstop lined a clutch two-run single to leftfield. John Leahy followed with a two-run double down the leftfield line to make it 5-4, and Smith eventually rescued Leahy with a single.

The winners added an insurance run in the seventh when Leahy singled and scored on an error.

Defensive standouts for Andover Gold, which has committed just one error in its first three games, were Scott Wilkins at second base (five chances), Billy Lane at shortstop (four chances) and John Leahy at first.

Leahy went 2-for-2 and reached base four times (two walks), while Mark Grams also contributed a basehit to stretch his hitting streak through three games.

Burton paced North Andover at 2-for-4.

The Ipswich River Watershed Association invites the public to its first bike trip of the season on Sunday, June 13. Meet at 1 p.m. at the IRWA sign in the Bradley Palmer parking lot at the main ate on Asbury Street, Topsfield. Call Jerry Model in Beverly.

Parks Is Oarsman

Oarsman Jess Parks, of Andover, helped Harvard's varsity crew team to a successful season this year.

Harvard's lightweight crew team recently captured their 21st Sprint Championship in 40 years as they edged a challenging Princeton crew by 1.3 seconds. The lightweight junior varsity boat finished third by six seconds, and the freshman boat placed second behind a very strong Navy crew. Harvard's Joep Cup victory awarded on the basis of team points (all three boats) is its 14th in the last 15 years.

The varsity crew finished their season with a 3-1 record. After whipping Coast Guard, the lights took the Biglin Bowl at Dartmouth by eight seconds and the Haines Cup against Navy by 12 seconds. In the Goldwithe Cup against Princeton and Yale at Yale, the Harvard crew finished second to the Eli crew by one half of one second. It was Yale's 11th Goldwithe, while Harvard this season won its 25th Biglin and 17th Haines.

Awarded Sports Bar

Laurel LoPresti, a sophomore majoring in physical and life sciences at Wilson College in south central Pennsylvania, has been awarded a 'Sports Bar' for playing and participating in athletics through two consecutive seasons.

Laurel, a member of the volleyball team, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis LoPresti, 14 Wildwood Road, Andover. She was presented the award at the annual awards banquet of the college Athletic Association.

Top rated competitors in field hockey, volleyball, basketball, lacrosse and tennis, as well as members of the gymnastics club, Nereids (the synchronized swimming club) and the riding club were honored for their performance and participation.

Athletes Honored

Larry Soule and Dave Hoffman of Andover, both students at Governor Dummer Academy, were recently honored at GDA's Spring Sports Awards Banquet held at the academy.

Soule, a senior and defenseman on the varsity lacrosse team, was co-recipient of the Senior Lacrosse Trophy.

Hoffman, a junior and two-year letterman, was elected co-captain of next year's team and was named to the Northern New England Division I All-Star team. He scored 22 goals this year and played midfielder.

First year athletes were awarded the Wilson 'W' and sports pin for their participation. A bar was presented to team members who played and participated through two consecutive seasons.

Win Letters

Elizabeth Laverack and Sara Cox, both of Andover, are 1982 Radcliffe Heavyweight Crew letter winners this year.

The Radcliffe heavy weight crew opened the season with a 15 second victory over Northeastern and a trailing MIT. The very next weekend, the heavies dominated once again as they edged a strong Princeton crew and whipped a third place Cornell.

But the Boston University crew poured it on in the final 200 meters to gain a seven second victory over a struggling Radcliffe eight while Dartmouth and Syracuse trailed. Rutgers upset Yale and Radcliffe as the Black and White slipped to a third place in the final 100 meters by one full second.

At the Sprints, a poor start and tough competition saw the Radcliffe crew bow to five crews, including the champion Princeton whom they had beaten already

Race At Hudson

Drivers from all over New England will compete in a "five-in-one" program, including a stunt car performance, Sunday afternoon at the Hudson Speedway, Hudson, N.H.

Late model modifieds and specially designed modified cars again will make up the "open competition" division that drew a 23-car field last Sunday. The variety of cars proved to be popular with the lightweight modifieds offering some stiff competition for the high-powered late model cars.

Sunday's practice will start at noon with the first qualifying heat at 1:30 p.m.

Street stocks, the slam-bang rookie stocks, limited super-modifieds and a spectator race also will be in action.

"The Bohemian Bandit" stunt car performance also will be included.

Frank Parks, 38 years old and known as the "Bohemian Bandit" in stunt driving ranks, is a Hollywood stuntman who has performed throughout the country. He plans to attempt a 100-foot ramp-to-ground jump driving a junk car, crashing into another car when he lands.

Fair At Salem

The buzz of a sheep-shearer's clippers, the whirl and splatter of a potter's wheel, the clack of a weaver's loom and the snip of papercutter's scissors will rise from a bustle of creative activity on Saturday, June 19, in Salem's Derby Square. "Summer Is A-Cumin' In," the Salem Folklife Festival, will bring folk artists and traditional craftspeople from Salem and the rest of southern New England to the Old Town Hall to demonstrate and explain their skills and show their finished products.

ZONING & BUILDING PROTECTION

Most communities now have some rules about what you build where, and for what purposes. Check these restrictions carefully before buying or building. You could discover, for example, that local zoning laws forbid running a business out of your home. Or you may be prohibited from using certain building materials, or building a guesthouse on your land. Generally, your recourse is to appeal to the local board for a variance, an exception to the rule.

Sometimes the law requires you to take out a building permit in order to make changes in your home. Normally, a permit is required just for major projects, not simple tasks like laying down a new floor or adding cabinets or bookcases. If you aren't certain about the need for a permit, it's wise to check. Also, be sure that any contractor you hire has obtained the necessary permits. To be safe, have that guarantee in writing. Also have him state in writing that the work he completes will comply with local building codes.

If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate, please phone or drop in at THE HOWE AGENCY, 4 PUNCHARD AVE., ANDOVER. Phone: 475-5100. We're here to help.

Budget

Those recommendations left out two positions that Mitsakos had originally included on a list of positions that the committee should give top priority for reinstating: a high school industrial arts teacher, and a junior high school guidance counselor.

The assistant superintendent explained that "setting priorities for reinstatement was difficult," and recommended the remaining two positions be funded if money becomes available.

The committee was especially interested in the industrial arts position, because the teacher who would be let go is the only one qualified to offer the graphic arts program — so that program would in fact be eliminated.

Noting that the work students produce in that program (for example, this week's high school graduation program) saves the school $6,000 to $9,000 a year in printing costs, Chairman Richard Neal instructed Paul to try to dig up some funds for the position by next week.

Theresa Sapienza of Rock O'Dundee Road urged the committee to fund the guidance counselor as well, because counselors offer emotional counseling to students, and not just help choosing courses.

At the junior high age, she said, "I can see a definite 100 percent need for this — you can't teach a kid that needs other help."

"There are cases to be made for all the positions," Neal answered. "I feel very hopeful that we will be able to address that area."

He explained that it was necessary to give secondary positions top priority at this time, so the administration can schedule courses for next year.

With an almost-final fiscal 1983 budget before them (the bottom line of $12.9 million has been final since town meeting; only the line item allocations have been changing), the committee pointed out that there has been a reduction in the teaching salary account of less than one percent, compared to the fiscal '82 budget.

"The amount of unfortunate reductions has been minimized to a great extent in the last several weeks," Neal said. "And we are moving closer and closer to our goal of getting all the positions (that were cut to stay within the budget) back."

But Andover Education Association President Steven Jankauskus disagreed on how great the impact on teachers has been.

"You are looking at the wrong figures by comparing fiscal '82 to fiscal '83," he told Neal. Comparing the teaching salary account in the $12.9 million budget with the one in the administration's original recommended $14.9 budget showed a 41.5 percent reduction, he said.

"The cut has really had a tremendous impact on the faculty," he added. "The level of services and variety of services available to Andover schoolchildren during the coming year will be very different than what they've been used to."

Neal replied that he "would be very happy to be sitting here talking about the $14.9 million budget," but the schools were limited to $12.9 million.

"There have been efforts made to minimize the impact," he explained. "I am not suggesting we have eliminated the impact."

people.

Neal suggested that the committee might develop a "resource bank" of townspeople who would be interested in advising the committee on special issues in areas within their field of expertise.

Poore said that could be done easily by referring to the town's "talent bank," a listing of people who are interested in volunteering their services to the town.

Art Fest

Wilmington Friends of the Arts will present its Festival of the Five Senses on Saturday, June 12 (rain date June 13) from noon to 9 p.m. on the Wilmington Common and high school area, Route 62, Wilmington. All day-time events are free of charge.

Artists from North Reading, Andover, Billerica, Reading, Tewksbury and Wilmington will participate in an invitational art exhibition. There will be demonstrations of fine crafts including stained glass, calligraphy and batik.

WE JUST DEVELOPED A FASTER, MORE SOPHISTICATED SYSTEM FOR MAKING LONG DISTANCE CALLS. HERE'S HOW YOU'LL RECOGNIZE IT:

beep.

It's just a little sound. But when you're away from home, it can make long distance calling so easy, it's like magic.

And right now, New England Telephone is adding that new beep to all the Touch-Tone™ phones in Andover.

Here's what'll happen. Whenever you dial "O" plus a long distance number at any Touch-Tone phone, you'll immediately hear the beep. Then, if you're at a pay phone or a coinless Charge-A-Call phone, you'll hear a recorded message that tells you exactly what to do next.

If you have a Calling Card (that's our new name for your Bell System credit card), just punch in your card number after the beep. Your call will go through like magic. It's easy — so easy you don't even need the operator. And that saves you time.

And another nice thing. Even if you want to make a series of long distance calls, now you only have to punch in your card number once (our new system has a very good memory). After you finish each call, instead of hanging up, just press the "*" button and dial your next call. Simple.

If you don't have a Calling Card, don't hang up. Just dial "O" again and the operator will handle your call as usual.

So remember, if you're looking for a fast easy way to make long distance calls, just listen. And we'll beep.

Awarding Of Diplomas Erases Weather's Gloom

By Sue Aucella Deacon

Pouring rain forced Andover High's 1982 commencement ceremonies off Lovely Field and into Phillips Academy's Case Memorial Cage Monday, but the gloomy weather didn't dampen the enthusiasm of the graduates, or their families and friends.

The unexpected move from the high school field to Phillips led to snarled traffic on Main Street, and finding a parking space took some creativity. But inside the cage, the mood was ebullient and the crowd, often boisterous.

State Representative Gerald M. Cohen of Andover, whose son Jonathan was among the graduates, offered a ten-minute address to the class of 450 graduating seniors.

When the master of ceremonies, Class President Joseph Z. Smith, said in his introduction that Cohen earned his B.S. at the University of Massachusetts, the representative joked, "You should never introduce a politician and say he has his degree in B.S."

Cohen then told the class that the most pressing problem facing them right now, as they go off to college or join the working world, is, "Who is going to do your laundry?"

As the graduates enter "the household of civilization," he urged them to "take part in that civilization." As they pass from "the relatively protected walls of Andover High to other, less protected worlds," the seniors should be ready to assume new responsibilities, he continued.

He explained that the cost of educating the Class of 1982 for 12 years added up to $12 million, making the class "the first $12 million class in Andover's history." And the public officials who made that investment expected to see "a long-term return on the investment of the taxpayers of this state."

"I would like to see the return on that investment come with the blossoming from this class of a great poet, a sculptor, an author, a scientist, a politician — someone regarded as one of the best in his field."

Cohen concluded by saying he saluted the graduates, and added, "I rather wish I had the chance to start out all over again with you."

And on a personal note, he thanked Andover, on behalf of himself and his wife, Annette, "for educating our four children."

Lilia D. Guerra read the valedictory essay, and was then presented the first Goldsmith Award for excellence in public speaking by AHS Principal Mary Athey Jennings.

The essayist told her classmates that "the Me Generation of the '70s has closed. We, the Class of 1982, shall help determine what the '80s shall be remembered as." She urged the class to take an active role in local, national and world affairs as they enter "the adult world."

Kathleen E. Nelligan gives the invocation.

Commencement

"We are the leaders of tomorrow. You have all heard that countless numbers of times, but do you really believe it," she asked. "or do you think someone else will lead?"

"We are a talented, ambitious class which should be very successful... We are a class of doers," Ms. Guerra concluded. "and we will show this world what we are capable of."

During the ceremony, School Superintendent Dr. Kenneth R. Seifert announced that more than $22,380 in scholarships have been awarded to the class, inviting the recipients to stand as he read their names.

Seifert also noted that the Class of '82 was the first class he has watched come all the way up from kindergarten since he came to Andover 13 years ago. ("Not many superintendents in Massachusetts can say that.")

The commencement ceremony began shortly after 5 p.m., with the soggy audience packed onto the floor of the cage and lining the balcony overhead. (The standees upstairs were twice asked to come downstairs because they were potentially overloading the balcony. They were reluctant to oblige, however.)

A musical prelude that was to have been conducted by Jonathan M. Cohen, Scott R. James, Alan P. Kaplan and Mark W. Newton was not played, perhaps because the exercises got off to a slightly late start.

The crowd applauded and cheered as the graduates, wearing royal blue caps and gowns, marched to their seats to "Pomp and Circumstance," played by the high school concert band, under the direction of Alfio Graceffa. The class marshals were Janet M. Corazza and Alan P. Kaplan.

The class president opened the exercises with welcoming remarks, offering special thanks to Phillips Academy "for allowing us to come inside from the rain."

Looking back over the history of the class, Smith noted that during their senior year, they saw the beginning of the J. Everett Collins Auditorium at the high school — "which will one day keep future classes dry on their graduation days."

Kathleen E. Nelligan offered the invocation, and class Secretary-Treasurer Christine A. Saalfrank led the salute to the flag. Julie-Anne Murphy conducted the band in the National Anthem, while Susan N. George and Mary J. Melia led the audience in singing the anthem.

Marei Guempel, an AFS exchange student from West Germany, thanked the school and said goodbye, and presented the flag of her country to the principal.

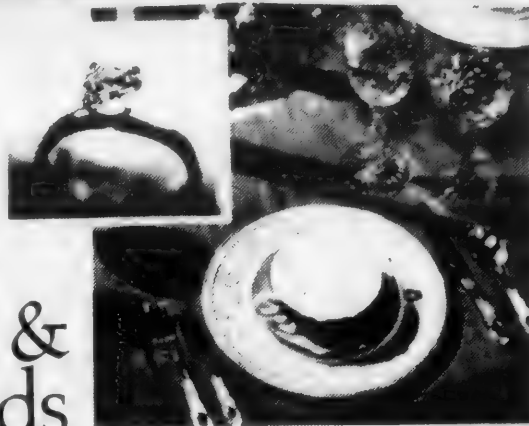

ABC (A Better Chance) student Valerie A. Holdip also offered thanks for her experiences in Andover. And she announced that science teacher David Wilkinson was the first recipient of the ABC Outstanding Teacher Award, for his "humor and humanity" and the help he gave to the ABC students this year. (Ms. Jennings accepted the award for Wilkinson, who was attending a family graduation.)

Ingrid A. DuMosch and Barbara M. Orfanedes won a standing ovation from their classmates after they sang their own composition, a soft, pretty love song called "The Fleeting Moment." Sophomore Maura King sang with them, and Ms. DuMosch played the piano accompaniment.

Following Lilia Guerra's essay, the A Capella Choir sang "Battle Hymn of the Republic," directed by J. Everett Collins and accompanied by Amy R. Lowe. Seifert then presented the scholarships, and Cohen delivered his address, leaving only the main business of the day: the awarding of diplomas.

Mary Jennings presented the graduates to the audience, saying, "Andover High School will live on in the education of these young people. I give you the graduating class of 1982."

Twenty minutes of wild cheering and clapping followed as four student readers, Carole B. Balin, Karen Jo Giammusso, Randall J. Lynch and Jeffrey A. Olsen, announced the name of each graduate, sometimes struggling to be heard above the din. Parents struggled for the best camera angles as the graduates filed briskly across the stage to be presented their diplomas by members of the School Committee.

As soon as the last diploma was granted, the seniors shouted and tossed their caps into the air for tradition's sake (and then tossed them back up a few more times just for good measure.)

Class Vice-President Joanne L. Fossella then offered the benediction and the band struck up the recessional, bringing the 123rd commencement exercises of Andover High School to a close — and sending the Class of 1982 off into their future.

(A complete list of all the graduates, a list of all scholarship winners, and the complete texts of Rep. Cohen's address and Lilia Guerra's essay appear elsewhere in this special section.)

Mary Melia and Susan George lead in singing The National Anthem.

Together we can make great things happen.

World's Problems Cannot Be Ignored

Lilia D. Guerra, delivers essay and valedictory.

The essay delivered by Lilia D. Guerra at Andover's commencement Monday night.

The me generation of the seventies has closed. We, the class of 1982, shall help determine what the '80's shall be remembered as.

During our years in school, we have seen the end of an unpopular war, the Watergate scandal, a Bicentennial Birthday celebration and most recently, the success of a re-usable space craft.

In the upcoming years, as we enter college and the working world, the decisions made in this nation will come to rest more and more upon our voices being heard.

We cannot take a laid back approach to the problems of this world. They have been ignored long enough. Poverty and other injustices that still exist in this country tend to overshadow the progress made in the areas of civil and minority rights.

Students of the 1970s were not recognized for their concern for national and international problems. Our consciences should not allow us to rest, knowing the intense persecution and civil strife that has occurred in countries such as Poland, Ireland and El Salvador.

We cannot tackle these problems expecting to get immediate results. Nor should we feel we alone can solve these problems. But we can start at home, in Andover, Massachusetts, and New England.

During our high school years, we have shown ourselves to be a class filled with enthusiasm and spirit. We have excelled in our academic, athletic, and artistic endeavors. Many have come forward to offer outstanding leadership and service to the entire community.

We voiced our opinions in the issues concerning us, from the cut back of teachers to the early release program. Through our actions, administrators realized our concern for a full education and responded to our pleas.

We must continue to voice our concerns after we leave Andover High School. The exercise of free speech is essential in a democratic society.

This class has the ability to change the future—for better or for worse. This high school has prepared us for college and for the working force. During our college years, we should become more and more active in the world that does exist outside of Andover.

This does not mean we should ignore Andover, though. We must deal with problems facing this town in the aftermath of recent cutbacks. As concerned members of the community, the class of '82 must try to revise or correct the values endorsed in the public programs servicing the community.

We cannot allow education to be cut back. All children should have a fair and equal right to the educational quality received by previous generations. If the students of today are not well educated, what will happen to the world of tomorrow? As Ovid, a Roman philosopher, said, "He who is not prepared for today, will be less so tomorrow."

We have been prepared. But our education in Andover will be wasted if it is not put to good use. We all have our individual dreams, but our common aspiration should be for peace in this often times inhumane world of man.

Peace. Virtually impossible? That is quite probable if someone does not take the first step. Traditionally, the young, bold people take the initiative; why should we be any different in our quickly expanding world of experience?

We are the leaders of tomorrow. You have all heard that phrase countless numbers of times, but do you really believe it, or do you think someone else will lead?

Many refuse to participate in society, blaming all our problems on the leaders. And what will happen tomorrow, when we are the leaders? Will we need an excuse or will we be satisfied with our accomplishments?

I hope we do not need excuses or scapegoats. We are a talented, ambitious class which should be very successful. But, we must actively participate in the adult world, and be both aware and concerned about its problems.

We have inherited many problems which we did not create. The arms race, political unrest in the entire world, great poverty and starvation, and injustices in our own court systems are just a few. We can bring fresh innovative ideas to solve or to alleviate these problems.

Class of 1982, the world is waiting for us to have an effect on it. We can do nothing and allow ourselves to be acted upon. But we are a class of doers and we will show this world what we are capable of.

Congratulations and good luck!

Commencement speaker Rep. Gerald M. Cohen addresses graduates.

The commencement address by State Rep. Gerald M. Cohen:

If each of you can see your parents now—out there—they are very concerned about you.

They may be concerned about your future jobs, although I am not.

They may be concerned about nuclear proliferation, although I am not.

As you leave home for college or work, to live by yourselves, what you had better think about, right now—is—who is going to do your laundry?

At the outset let me tell you how glad I am to be with you for your graduation ceremony. For it is, indeed, a happy occasion: a rewarding occasion; an occasion that celebrates your achievements; an occasion that marks the successful completion of your studies at Andover High School; and the commencement of your adult life.

My popularity would be tremendously enhanced were I now to yield to the impulse to offer a five-word graduation address: "Congratulations! Best Wishes! Good Luck! And let it go at that. But, you know that a politician, when offered a platform and an audience, can never so limit himself.

I use the expression, "politician," not as a term of disparagement, but rather of vocation. I submit it is an honorable calling, a noble one, the calling, in fact, of Thomas Jefferson and James Madison and Abraham Lincoln, one that many of you, I hope, will be prompted to choose so that you may do your part, as they did, in advancing the cause of good government.

Although, I do say to each of you most sincerely, "Congratulations! Best Wishes! Good Luck! I have an additional word or two to offer you.

As graduating seniors, you now take your place in the household of civilization, and the question is whether you are willing to take part in that civilization. Are you willing to "go for it?"

Each of you is different, a unique person with God-given talents that you alone possess. The building of a community begins with your recognition of what you can bring to it. Some have been given the talent to make major contributions, others have been given smaller talents, but each has some talents that are his alone.

You cannot build community, or love your fellow man, if you are doing your own thing. Love is understanding that everything you do affects someone, and anything you do to help your fellow man helps him to realize his ideal, his purpose in life.

As you proceed to fashion your careers, allow the fortunate start you have had at Andover High to prompt you always to seek a moral and humane dimension in your adult life in whatever may be your calling—religion, education, law, medicine, diplomacy, engineering, finance, art, public health or business. And make your goals worthy of yourselves.

Robert Frost once defined education as something like being able to hang on until you've caught on. Well, each of you has hung on long enough to catch on, and catch your diploma in the process.

BEST WISHES TO THE CLASS OF 1982

ANDOVER SPA
9 Elm St. 475-4750

School Committeeman Robert Smith chats with Assistant Principal Steven Richardson.

Cohen

So, this is a significant day!

It marks—as Gail Sheehy would say—another 'right of passage' in your life. You pass from the relatively protected halls of Andover High to other less protected worlds, and to new responsibilities.

I know that, as consumers of the education product here for 12 years, you leave with certain complaints. This is natural and understandable. But, it is important that you leave here also with a sense of understanding of the investment many people have made in you.

The aim of public education today is to provide quality education at reasonable cost to the largest number of qualified students possible. Now that costs money! A lot of money! In Andover, the cost of educating your class for 12 years was 12 million dollars. You are the first "12 million dollar class" in Andover's history!!

For all public educational affairs—from kindergarten through graduate school—the figure is 2 billion dollars out of a state budget of 7 billion dollars. These figures indicate that Massachusetts government has made a big investment in public education and in you.

Yet, this has not always been a popular investment, or an investment understood by the general public, or even by the public educational establishment itself. Part of the reason is the very nature of education itself—it is an abstract investment—whose 'payoff' is difficult, indeed, almost impossible to measure, in the short run.

And politics, and public policy decisions in a democratic system of government, often are dictated on a short-run basis. So, in appropriating a great deal of money for public education (which is never enough in the view of administrators), public officials have been investing in you.

Investing in you!

Investing in you to perform productively in society!

Investing in you to provide a long term return on the investment of the taxpayers of this state.

And it doesn't have to be a return in terms of dollars alone, (although as educated individuals, you will return far more in income tax payments to the state treasury than was invested originally in your education here).

Personally, I would like to see the return on the investment come with the blossoming from this class of a great poet—a sculptor—an author—a scientist—a politician—someone regarded as one of the best in his or her field.

I remember vividly my own commencement, my own beginning. I remember a kind of kaleidoscope of emotions, pride, that I am sure you feel now, and satisfaction that I had done more or less what my parents had hoped that I was going to do, and a combination of anticipation and anxiety about what lay ahead. All that, and very much the determination that I would somehow make it; that I would honor the chance that I had been given.

I even remember what the speaker at my high school graduation talked about—he talked about 30 minutes too long.

Cohen

I wasn't quite sure what it was that I was going to be, but I knew that the world surely did not owe me a living, that the competition would be keen and that still and all I wanted to be honest and faithful to what I perceived as my ideals.

So, I salute you, your parents and your exciting and mysterious future and I wish you good luck; and the fact is, to tell you the truth, I rather wish I had the chance to start out all over again with you.
